Hand Protection Poster Campaign Extended

Marigold® Industrial has extended its hand protection poster campaign following the overwhelming success of the original launch. The original poster campaign – which highlighted how not wearing the right gloves at work could have a significant impact on someone's social and family life – was initially devised for the construction industry, stemming from a project the company undertook with Kier Construction. Such was the success of the poster campaign Marigold® Industrial has produced three new generic hand protection posters to add to the existing ones.

Indoor Air Quality (IAQ) Monitor

The Wireless Indoor Air Quality Profile Monitor from PPM Technology is a continuous monitor of multiple IAQ parameters. Real-time functions enable immediate warnings of the presence of harmful gases in the air, thus protecting employees and the public. The system has been designed for ease of set-up and operation. A manager PC controls the wireless network allowing for transmitting and receiving of information to and from each wireless unit. The PPMonitor software enables the data to be viewed graphically, and produce reports and statistical data. Analysis of the recorded data over time allows for more efficient management of resources and energy.

Reducing Total Cost of Ownership (TCO)

Nederman has reduced prices on service and spare parts to further improve value for customers purchasing their systems. The reductions – as high as 20% – come with advice to those looking to invest in extraction systems, industrial filtration or other Nederman solutions, to evaluate TCO alongside purchase price. Nederman's UK projects division not only offers upfront design and commissioning support but also service contracts, extended warranty, COSHH certification, national fast response service and breakdown cover through an in-house aftersales team. The reduction in service part pricing, combined with a service contract, can save money and offer budget transparency, the company claims.
